Pacific Network for Mission Education is a California ecumenical organization enabling Christians through mutuality to participate in building global solidarity. PNME exists to work with congregations, individuals and faith-based organizations to share mission information, ideas and practices.

Come, join in the study of the mission movement in China from the early 1900's to the present. See for yourself the fruits of early missionaries and their effects on present day Christian communities – especially among the minorities of Yunnan. Rev. Bao JiaYuan, General Secretary of Theological Training for the China Christian Council, will lead us on a trek to the far western corner of Yunnan where the Lisu tribe lives. Rev. James Shum will fill us in on the cultural and historical development of Yunnan. See how we can fit into their struggles and development as a Christian community.

PURPOSE:

- To build face to face relationships and (re)open new opportunities for joint involvement in China's rural church development.
- To learn & relate with communities started by the early China Inland Missionaries
- To see the progress and problems of Christians of minority heritage
- To meet with religious leaders and see how church leaders are trained
- To visit local churches, seminaries & bible schools
- To learn of the cultural diversities in Yunnan
